Description:

This small frame house appears to date from about 1920. It is a one story, two bay "shot gun" house, gable-fronted and covered with aluminum siding. At the front elevation is a door and a window with a second window in the gable. The house is three bays in depth with shed extensions to the rear. A small entrance porch extends across the front.

This is an unusual house type for Funkstown and Washington County. The building may have been modified from some other function.
